IT WAS THEIR DOG.

Mamle and Gertie Owned It. But Could Not Agree Upon Its Color.

"Keep still, Mamie. Ingo is brown and white with a dark tip on his nose," said the elder sister recently to the man who gives canines a license to live in Minneapolis.

"What's the color of the dog?" laquired the man without removing his eye from his pad of blanks.

"Why, Gertle, you must be crazy. Ingo is black and buff. I should think you would know the color of the dog Charlie gave you."

"What's the color of the dog?" repeated the licensor with a perceptible hardness of voice.

"Well, Mamle, if you know all about Ingo perhaps you had better tell it. We'll never get a license if you keep interrupting the man. Ingo's brown and white and is just as handsome as he can be."

"He's no more brown and white than I am, but if you want to have him described that way, why, of course, he's your dog. You must be color blind.'

"What is the color of the dog?" said the man with his teeth elenahed. "Well, put him down brown and white when a little dog-that's when he was given to me-but he's kind of "That's right, tell the truth. No: use in being sentimental over a dog."

Mamie and Gertie, who are not pressed for time." HE WAS SOMEWHAT CHANGED. But Under the Circumstances the Artist

Had Done His Bost. "Are you the man who painted that 'ere picture of 'Moses in the Bullrushes?"" asked a countryman of an artist, who had recently startled the town by an exhibition of oil paintings.

"Yes," replied the artist. "All right; then I want you to paint my father." "Certainly, if he gives me a few sittings."

"Can't do it; he's dead." "Let me have a photograph of him." "Can't do that, neither. He never had his picture taken." "I am afraid, then, I must decline."

"Decline! What for? Haven't you painted Moses? You didn't have a photograph of him, did you? No. 1 thought not. Well, my father hain't been dead nearly so long as Money, you ought to know enough to paint my father. Appreciating the situation the artist went to work and evolved such a portrait as he thought might satisfy so original a son. "Crikey" exclaimed the art patron on seeing the completed painting of Moses; but, I say, how he has changed."

ABOUT HOTEL FIRES.

How so Many of Them Originate in the Old, Old Way. "Nine hotel fires out of ten own their origin to one and the same cause," said Chester Murray, of the house restaurant, in Washington. "Whenever you hear of a hotel fire whose origin is a mystery it is safe to attribute it to the cause I will give. The best cooking lard is the fat that is fried out of the fat part of beef. In restaurants and hotels It is put into a cauldron during the day and set on the range over night. A light fire is usually kept in the range to save the trouble of starting it in the morning. During the night it may happen that an unusual drouth is created by a high wind. The fire blazes up, the cauldron begins to boll and the fat is in the flame. Next the flame is in the pot, and then follows an explosion, scattering the blazing greats in every direction. Result-a fire of mysterious origin, which destroys the building and all its contents. I have been burned out seven times, and in every instance but one it was due to this

How the Aure Beat the Sauke. When the ants are on the war path they march through the forests of tropical countries in countless numbers. Nothing can stay their onward progress. During one of these marches in Honduras, the advance guard of the army came upon a snake that had not got away in time, as most animals try to do. So the snake showed fight. With every switch of its tall it killed scores of its insect foes, but still the swarms of ants poured on, all flereely attacking the enemy. By-and-by the struggles of the snake grew fainter. until at last, exhausted by the onesided combat, the scrpent perished under the overwhelming assault of its innumerable adversaries. Getting Even.

Nat Goodwin, the comedian, visits London nearly every summer and invariably meets Sir Augustus Harris, who gives him a pump-handle bandshake and then forgets him. A few nights ago Goodwin and Harris were in the same room, and some one led Harris up to Goodwin with the remark: "You've been introduced to Sir Augustus Harris, haven't you, Nat?" "Yes," Goodwin replied, "annually, for the last seven years." Then he turned away and went on talking with some one else.

Dangerous Beroles.

Dramatic effects are hazardon agencies to use, as it is not impossible to spoil them by an unti-climax-84 2 member of the English parliament found, when at the close of a Bery adjuration to the government to declare war, he cried out: "Unsheath the sword!" and, drawing a dagger, threw it on the floor. "Ah!" coolly said at opponent; "there is the knife but where is the fork?" A shout of laugh ter was the result.
